Transformational Leadership

December 05-07, 2016

Leadership plays a critical and vital role in deciding and realising the potential of an organisation. Often, it is leadership which decides the direction, impact and relevance of an organisation. Be it, social, not-for profit or a commercial establishment. There are documented insights related to (a) what are the key attributes and characteristics of an effective leadership, (b) can leadership be cultivated or is it an in-born trait of an individual, (c) is there a correlation between leadership style and performance (both operational and financial) of an organisation?

It is well known that leadership styles vary and contribute to the effectiveness of the organisation based on the context in which the organisation is operational.

This executive education programme is focused on transformational leadership. By transformational leadership, we mean leaders who have made significant contribution to the organisation (which they preside over) in terms of measurable performance and internal culture. Transformational leaders also ensure sustainability on the organisational performance and robustness of the internal culture. Human history in general and business history in particular has recorded abundant examples of transformational leaders and their contributions to the organisation and hence to the community at large.
