Programme on Organizational Leadership for the Twenty-First Century

January 6 - 9, 2020

For all who are interested in developing their leadership potential.
What will be the limiting organizational resource in the twenty-first century?

- Technological abilities
- Analytical abilities
- Conceptual abilities
- Leadership skills

Check one and turn to page two

Any person who wishes to become a leader that posterity will remember should take this program. This course develop insights, vision within an ethical holistic perspective.

A participant from the programme in 2018

The programme gives different perspective of learning which is very important for learning the leadership aspects. It is easy to take multiple classroom session on leadership but difficult to learn what it means. This training exactly targets the difficult part.

A participant from the programme in 2018

Expectation of the program is to develop yourself. This program helps to understand literature and develop thinking. As a leader first need to develop yourself as a great human being first. It is learning it's not an end.

A participant from the programme in 2017

"The biggest lacuna in our education / training systems is an emphasis on success outputs but not the means. This programme reposition the focus on ethics, dilemma's (of human minds), conflicts of right & wrong. The programme does not expect its students to create on the imaginary righteous world, but grounded with the real situations of day to day life."

A Participant from the programme in 2016

"It gives us the perspective that things in life are not black or white, but grey.

And in its grey colour there are different shades. And it's for a person to decide this colour based on independent keeping the context in mind." "Quite useful in terms of seeing things in perspective and that there cannot be an optimal way of doing things in life."

If you have checked item (iv) in the previous page, you are in line with the thinking of many current day management thinkers.

Today, the concern is to build "Living Organizations" (Ariel de Guese) that are "Built to Last" (Collins and Porras) and with a "Soul" (Secretan).
Who will build these organizations?

YOU,

if you develop your leadership potential

WELCOME to the Executive Education Programme offered by IIMA to do just that.

You can be at any level in your organization. Or not belonging to any organization at all.
Just yourself.

But yes, you should be one who is interested in developing your potential through a process of introspection and reflection. You should be one who feels that leadership is really going to be a crucial factor in the Millennium. And it will require preparation. And you will be one who is interested in preparing yourself for your role as a leader.

YOUR FACULTY

will be first yourself, guided by

- Cervantes, with his immortal classic 'Don Quixote', who will raise issues on the roles of dreams, adventures and reality.
- Richard Attenborough with his film 'Gandhi'.
- George Bernard Shaw, with his play 'Saint Joan', will introduce you to a leader with vision, vigour and action.
- Girish Karnad, with his play 'Tughlaq', a leader with vision but whose means do not justify the ends.
- Vishakhadatta with his classic Sanskrit play 'Mudra Rakshasa' (in English, of course) where purity of purpose scores over even questionable means.
- Irawati Karve with her interpretation of the characters of Mahabharata in 'Yuganta' where ideals and pragmatism clash endlessly.
- Milind Bokil with his short story 'Thirsting for Water' in which you will understand the role of the leader as a catalyst and the difference between success and satisfaction.
- Bimal Kar with his short story 'Satyadas' in whom you will see the impact of greed and loss of self respect.

These eminent faculty will be assisted by

Professor S. Manikutty
Professor Sebastian Morris

Pedagogy

In this course, there will not be any management cases; just one paper that would discuss the role of profits vs. other building blocks for an organization that enables it to last.

Just read and enjoy great works of literature. Masticate them and chew the cud in the class. Enhance your experience through lively discussions on different issues on leadership and decision making that these great works bring up. Reflect on them. See what it is likely to be with the great masters. See how you can carry on the ideas and the habit of reading and thinking further in your life.
